Cuthbert was born the bastard son of a minor noble. He grew up at his fathers manor but was constantly tormented by his older siblings and others, partly because of his illegitimate status and partly because he was a quiet, solitary child. While his brothers trained in the arts of war Cuthbert pursued learning, thinking to join the church.

One day a hermetic mage named Benedict passed by the manor. He sensed the Gift in young Cuthbert and paused to speak to him. Impressed with the boys intelligence he took him as his apprentice. Cuthbert soon adapted to Covenant life and worked hard at his studies, excelling in the Arts of Rego and Vim. For the first time in his life he felt at home. To Cuthbert the Covenant bacame the source of stability in his life - it took him in and made him welcome. He decided that one day he would establish a Covenant of his own, to give others the same opportunity and help to increase the knowledge and stability of the order. In Lyn Brenig he has this opportunity and he's determined not to fail (not that he expects to).

Cuthbert is fairly non-descript in appearance being of average height. He is clean shaven and tends to wear plain brown robes. Whenever he casts a spell his eyes momentarily turn yellow.
